

STORIES DENIED

Turkish Police Made No Raid on the Sedik Pasha Quarters.

Also, the Rumors of Wholesale Arrests Found to Be Untrue.

The Armenians of Beirut Are in Open Revolt against the Authorities—The Army Corps in European Turkey and Asia Minor Are to Be Mobilized.

London, Nov. 8.—The Standard Friday denies the story it published Thursday morning to the effect that the Turkish police made a raid on the Sedik Pasha quarters in Constantinople, were resisted and many lives were lost in the fighting that occurred.

The Standard's correspondent telegraphs that he has visited the central prison in Constantinople, having obtained official sanction therefor, and found that the rumors of wholesale arrests were untrue. He states that he is convinced that there has been no wholesale exaggeration of the number of Armenians killed in the city.

The Armenians of Beirut are in open revolt against the authorities.

In an interview Said Pasha, who was Thursday appointed president of the council, and who gave a version of the situation on the lines of the official dispatches, referred to the alleged lecture of prisoners. He insisted the case of the Armenians was charged with complicity in a treasonable plot, and that, to extract a confession from him, Said Pasha denied the reports of his torture that had been sent to England.

The correspondent had been permitted to visit Beirut and had found him in a comfortable room in the Central prison with his co-adjutor, Nuhif Effendi. He has his own bedding and clothing and was given good food. He was suffering from bronchitis and was treated by Dr. Dobrahanian, who graduated in London. Izet emphatically denied that he had been tortured. He was in good spirits.

Dr. Dobrahanian assured the correspondent that he was convinced that he had never been tortured. The correspondent suggests that other stories coming from the same source as that of the torture of Izet are equally untrue.

The Standard's Vienna correspondent telegraphs that he has been informed that all five of the army corps in European Turkey and Asia Minor are likely to be shortly mobilized, additional troops being wanted in Constantinople, and the army corps not being sufficient for Anatolia.

The Standard says that Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador for Turkey, who lately returned from a visit to the Balkans, will return to his post in a few days.

Important Victims ascertained.
LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Nov. 8.—James Bartley Wilson, ex-sheriff of Faulkner county, was shot and killed by a man from Alaska. The man who did the shooting is supposed to be one of the gang that assassinated Albert England last Monday. The wound is fatal. Active inquiry into the circumstances which led up to the assassination of England shows that the man was murdered by a man who was to get him out of the way in order to prevent an investigation of the crime for which he was arrested, and of which it is believed they were equally guilty.

TO THE RESCUE.

Twenty-Eight Bodies Taken From the Detroit Ruins, And Yet the Work of the Tired Searchers Is Not Finished.

A Dry Boiler, Not a Drop of Water, Tells the Story of the Terrible Calamity—This Fact Settled Beyond All Doubt on Thursday.

The progress of the men working on the ruins resulting from Wednesday's terrible explosion was very slow after 3 o'clock Thursday morning, and from two o'clock until 6 o'clock only two more bodies were dug out of the debris.

They were those of Adolph Schreiber, aged 25, foreman of Miller's bindery; John Gordon, aged 32, stereotypor; Detroit Journal.

A large force of men were put to work about 7 o'clock, and the work was necessarily slow as it is progressing much more rapidly.

At 9 o'clock the searchers uncovered the nineteenth body. It was that of a man named Neuhauer, one of Miller's employees. Five minutes later the body of a woman was dug out, and at ten minutes past nine another body was recovered, and was not at once recognized.

The cause of Wednesday's frightful explosion was not beyond all question Thursday morning, when the workers on the ruins got down to the boiler. The explosion was caused by a dry boiler.

By 4 o'clock twenty-two bodies in all had been taken from under the mass of debris, and three more had been taken to the list of the unidentified. They were: John E. Breitenbecker, aged 19, an employee of Miller's book bindery; Rose Morgan and Kittle Leonard. Miss Morgan was an employee in Miller's, and Miss Leonard an employee of John Davis & Co. The two bodies unidentified at this hour are those of girls.

The heavy steel wall of the Journal building proper is considered to be in an unsafe condition and the fire chief has issued orders that the fire be kept out of the building, no work being done as a support to it, and not to disturb it. This will hinder the work of rescue, as it is under the debris that the majority of the missing will be found. It is altogether likely that the Journal building will be condemned and will have to come down.

One of the two unidentified bodies, supposed to be that of a girl, was identified by John Korbner shortly after 11 o'clock. It was that of his son, John, a boy of 17 years of age, who was employed at Miller's.

More than one hundred men, all who can be worked to advantage, are at work in the ruins which is probably yet the tomb of many unfortunate men and women. They talk as they work, and the crowd talks with them. Suddenly a crowd of workmen stop and commence to remove timbers in a brick wall more over. They find the foot of a girl.

The news travels, the laborers talk in whispers; the drivers cease to urge their horses, and the thousands of spectators are still. The word is whispered from lip to lip that No. 23 has been found, that it is the body of a girl. The little knot of workers around her fall back with rubbish as they uncover the body and quickly cover the mangled and discolored body with a blanket. Out in the crowd, kept back by the police, a woman cries: "I know it is my girl; my girl! Can she be alive?"

At another point a little boy is sobbing and murmuring, "My sister, oh my sister."

The bodies are placed on a stretcher and carried away to the temporary morgue. As the stretcher borne by four policemen turns the corner, the crowd of the thousands of spectators are still. The word is whispered from lip to lip that No. 23 has been found, that it is the body of a girl. The little knot of workers around her fall back with rubbish as they uncover the body and quickly cover the mangled and discolored body with a blanket. Out in the crowd, kept back by the police, a woman cries: "I know it is my girl; my girl! Can she be alive?"

Steps are being taken to brace the ruins of the Journal building, the hope being that the work of the rescuers can be expedited.

Fireman Robert Henderson, of truck No. 8, was precipitated into a pit ten feet deep while working in the ruins Thursday morning. He received a bad gash over the eye and was in a stunned condition when hauled out. He was removed to Emergency hospital to have his wounds attended to.

"Number 27" was picked out shortly before five o'clock. The face had been blackened by smoke and fire, but the body was identified as that of Emma Lichtenberg, by her watch and chain. The body was taken to the morgue.

"No. 28" was dug out. It was the body of a girl. The head and feet and one leg had been buried off, but part of her victim's clothing was intact and she was identified as one of the Weid-bach sisters, but whether it was Anna or Lizzie, the person making the identification, could not be sure. The girls, Annie and Lizzie, were cousins of Helma Weidbach, whose body was recovered Thursday morning.

The bodies were taken to the morgue and reported missing until Thursday morning.

A dry boiler, not a drop of water tells the whole story of the terrible calamity, which was caused by an explosion of one boiler that was set off by a fire.

This fact was definitely settled Thursday morning when the fire chief's estimate, caused by an explosion of one boiler that was set off by a fire.
